2014 Annual Giving Campaign

As this year's honorary co-chair for the Jefferson County Historical Society's 2014 Annual Giving Campaign we are excited in the opportunity to share with you how the History Center excels at meeting the challenge of recovering and preserving our county's past and shines in presenting it through a wide variety of exhibits, publications and programs to our area residents and visitors.

Along with an ever changing schedule of exhibits, public events and programs the JCHS has numerous upcoming bookings for the "Kate M. Scott – Did She or Didn't She" public performances. Publications on Kate Scott and the Scripture Rocks will soon be available and filming continues toward the completion of the "American Towns At War Hope Deferred" television production. Early in 2015 the site construction of the Scripture Rocks heritage park is set to begin.

None of this happens without a cost!

The JCHS Board continually critiques how and where funding is achieved and how it is resourcefully managed to best meet the goals of the mission. To help support the History Center to meet its goals and continue to be the "Jem of Jefferson County" we invite you to participate with a tax deductible donation to help us reach this year's campaign goal of $25,000.

Please join us now by mailing in your tax deductible annual giving contribution that will help preserve the rich history of Jefferson County for our future generations.

JCHC Assessment

Currently the JCHS collections are undergoing a formal assessment under the auspices of a specially funded Historical Collections Assessment grant whereby an authority on conservation and collections management is visiting our facilities to review our storage capabilities, documentation procedures and methods of collections care in order to provide helpful recommendations.

In August Jeff Slack, who is an Historic Building assessor from Pittsburgh, visited the History Center to examine our two oldest buildings. Conservator Laura Schell from Lockport, New York, also visited to review what we do to conserve our collections

When completed, this assessment will help us evaluate our current procedures and improve our chances for so we can continue to use the best practices available in caring for the items that you have entrusted to the JCHS.

The Scripture Rocks Why Douglas Stahlman Carved His Legacy in Stone By Brian L Fritz and Kenneth Burkett

Many local legends abound about the mysterious carved Bible rocks frequently encountered in the wooded hillsides around Brookville, Pennsylvania. Over the past 6 years, volunteers from the Jefferson County History Center and North Fork Chapter 29 of the Society for Pennsylvania Archaeology have undertaken an extensive quest to relocate, map and record the Scripture Rocks, and learn the true facts about the man who carved them.

This book is intended to be a historically accurate account of Stahlman's life and to preserve a record of his work without bias for or against his religious convictions and his chosen life style. Included is a transcription of Stahlman's personal The Dedicated Rocks book and many of his inscriptions that are preserved in stone. .

Soft Cover 250 pages.

County Receives New PHMC Historical Marker

Pennsylvania's newest state historical marker was unveiled on Thursday, August 28th by the Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission and the Pennsylvania Game Commission at the site of the Commission's original Ross Leffler School of Conservation.

The marker is now located at the original site of the School of Conservation at the intersection of Game School Road and Empire Ridge Road in Brockway, Jefferson County.

The Ross Leffler School of Conservation was the first academy in the nation devoted entirely to the training of game wardens or game protectors, who are now known as wildlife conservation officers. According to the marker nomination form prepared by the Game Commission, "For years the Game Commission had been holding occasional conferences to keep game protectors (officers) abreast of changes in wildlife law and enforcement issues, and to provide specialty instruction. The agency's desire to improve game protector training led to talk of establishing its own training school. The training school idea slowly but surely gathered support. The board president Ross Leffler championed the cause, and in October 1931 the commissioners directed him to proceed with the establishment of a training school.

The resulting innovation, the Ross Leffler School Conservation, eventually became the model for the rest of the nation, producing 648 full-time game protectors and wildlife conservation officers through 29 graduating classes, the 29th of which graduated in March 2013.

According to a 1932 issue of Pennsylvania Game News, official publication of the Game Commission, "On July 7, 1932, the agency dedicated the Pennsylvania Game Commission Training School near the town of Brockway on State Game Lands 54 in Jefferson County. The school, an old hunting lodge owned by a Pittsburgh attorney, was found to provide one-week blocks of special training and refresher.

In early 1936 the Game Commission announced it was looking for men between the ages of 21 and 40 to become "student officers," the school's first class. More than 2,000 men asked for information on the school and nearly half of them filed applications. From this field of candidates, 434, representing every county, were chosen to compete in entrance examinations.

On July 7, 1936, 35 prospective officers, averaging 25 years of age. Eight months later, 27 men graduated. The school moved from Brockway into a wing of the Game Commission's Harrisburg headquarters in 1987.

New Exhibits

Recovery, Reunions, and Remembrance

The end of the Civil War was a joyous time for the Union. However, many soldiers never made it home.

Our newest exhibit Recovery, Reunions, and Remembrance depicts the ways fallen soldiers were returned home from the Civil War and how veterans and their families came together to deal with their losses, remember the sacrifices their comrades, and celebrate their service in the struggle to preserve the Union.

Come check out Dr. McKinney's embalming station, delve into the stages of mourning during the Civil War period, learn about the GAR and SUV and discover where Memorial Day got its start!

The exhibit will be available until June 2015

Carole puts the final touches on a case full of needlework objects. She says, "It all started when we received a set of diaries written by Sarah Henry in the 19th century. She knit, she crocheted, she quilted, and her writing got me thinking about all of the wonderful needlework in our collection. It's a perfect case of things for the Adda Edelblute Pearsall Parlor!"

NOW BOOKING

Kate M. Scott: Did She or Didn't She? is a 45 minute dramatic program featuring Clarinda Darr as Kate and Mark Lussky as Osborn Oldroyd, a Lincoln collector who, according to some sources, took a deposition from Kate during which she claimed to be the mother of a daughter of John Wilkes Booth. Supported by a grant from the Pennsylvania Humanities Council, the program is available to audiences of 25 or larger at almost no cost. Contact cbriggs-jchc@windstream.net to make arrangements.

Curator's Corner

It took the Carnegie Museum of Natural History ninety-seven years to change the dinosaur exhibit in a major way. There was one dinosaur in 1915, then more specimens were gradually added. Then with great publicity the entire hall was revamped and reopened in 2007. All this leads to the question--How much change and how often should exhibits change in a county museum?

When the History Center opened in 2004, the Bowditch Model Railroad was meant to be permanent, but even it changes annually. While the basic layout remains the same, models are removed, moved, or replaced with new models that represent Jefferson County buildings. For example, this year the Courthouse is in storage and the Moon Light Drive-In is new.

We knew the first-floor landing was the perfect spot to welcome visitors and highlight the 1804 founding of the county, our handsome courthouse, and the judges who have served here. And we planned to show the stories of Living on the Land in the Parker Gallery.

On the second floor Some Things in Common would feature temporary exhibits to show the similarities of the people, places, and events of the county, because our thirteen focus groups had identified many similarities among our various communities.

Galleries B and C would each be home to a temporary exhibit for up to twelve months. Exhibits in the Grand Hall on the second floor would change about every six months. People told us they like to "step back in time" so the parlor would remain relatively untouched.

We've kept to that schedule quite well. The entire county experienced the Civil War, and since 2011, we've exhibited those stories in galleries B and C. We began with Drumbeat to War, then traced the movement of people of color through the area, then showed life on the home front. We brought in the Heinz History Center's exhibit, The Civil War in WPA and Ron Palms great collection of CW images. We depicted the recruitment of the 105th PA Wildcats, emphasized the importance of the Berdan Sharpshooters, introduced visitors to the eminent historian Kate M. Scott, and now are exhibiting Reunions and Remembrance as the Civil War Commemoration comes to a close.

In the Grand Hall we recently switched out "Wilma's Watercolors" for "The Cartoons of David Strohm."

The permanent exhibit in the Parker Gallery does a good job of showing people what has happened over time in this area. Visitors like peeking into the cabin, the woodworker's shop, the mining office, and the camp, but even this exhibit has been changed in small ways. We have changed objects in the cabin, added objects to the camp, and focused on different businesses in two wall cases.

We do think it is important that, even though a person has visited once or twice, new exhibits or at least a new case or two of things should be available.

More than a decade ago, folks in the county helped us determine what we all would like to see in our History Museum. Now it's time for an update and your turn to identify the people, places, and events of Jefferson County that you would like to see depicted in future exhibits.

HAUNTED BROOKVILLE

Dr. Todd Pfannestiel and a team of local investigators have examined some of the most haunted locations in town.

Here is the evidence.

Join Us Saturday, October 25th at 7:00PM at the Jefferson County Courthouse for an evening of spirit, haunts, and history.

Spirits!

Paranormal!
the Unknown!

Tickets available at the Door!

Haunted Brookville

History is alive and well in Brookville! By now, you've probably heard that the History Center is delving into a new type of research—paranormal investigation. Looking into the most haunted locations in town gives us the ability to connect with our forefathers (and mothers) in a new and different way. For example, an investigation of the Nathan Greene Edelblute building has helped us understand the people who lived here and what life was like during the time they lived here at the History Center.

Our team, comprised of local investigators, utilizes a number of techniques and equipment in order to document and interact with spirits. We have compiled some very interesting and compelling evidence along the way. We have documented such things as orbs, light anomalies, EVPs or electronic voice phenomenon (a.k.a. "spirit voices"), among other things. At a historic home in town, one woman mutters "Don't forget me..." as investigators begin to pack up for the evening.

Have you heard the stories about the Jefferson County Courthouse? It is rumored that the twice hung man still walks the Courthouse grounds. Our investigators have something to say about that! So, be sure to join us at the Jefferson County Courthouse at 7:00 pm on October 25th to check out the evidence! Tickets are $5.00 for adults over 12 years old at the door.

Tickets at the Door
Saturday, October 25th, 7 PM

If you believe your building, home, or business to have activity and would be willing to have our team look into your case, please don't hesitate to contact Cara at the History Center or at cstockdale-jhc@windstream.net.

Wildcats Are Coming to Brookville

Like their brothers in arms, the members of the "Wildcat Regiment Band" were swept up in the wave of patriotism enveloping the United States, both North and South, in 1861. During that same year in Pennsylvania, the men of Indiana, Jefferson, Clarion, Clearfield and Westmoreland Counties answered their country's call to arms and joined the standard of the "Wildcat Regiment".

The Wildcat Regiment Band today is comprised of musicians of all ages and from various professional backgrounds. Like their predecessors, the current bandsmen have been recruited from the same geographical area in Pennsylvania and come from all walks of life.

The Wildcat Band has performed for historic and civic events throughout the Eastern United States. National Park Service engagements include regular visits to Antietam, Sharpsburg, Fredericksburg, Gettysburg, Harpers Ferry, Manassas, and Monocacy.

The band has been invited to perform in the Governor's Residence in Harrisburg as well as the Pennsylvania

House of Representatives. The Wildcats have been fortunate to participate in musical events at the Smithsonian Institution and the Kennedy Center in Washington, DC.

It also performs at 19th century balls, dances and cotillions. The band also conducts lectures and demonstrations that address the history of the 19th century brass band movement and the evolution of brass instruments.

From brass buttons and simple hand stitching, to wooden pegged brogans, the Wildcat Regiment Band brings authenticity in dress and manner. The band's uniforms - sewn from natural wool fibers, are authentic in every detail, and have been patterned from actual specimens worn by Pennsylvania bandsmen in the Union army. This authenticity in dress presents the audience with the most accurate appearance possible...next to actually living during the 1860s

The Jefferson County Historical Society and the Pennsylvania Council on the Arts which is a state agency funded by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the National Endowment for the Arts are happy to invite you to join us on Saturday evening, November 29th at 7 pm for this exciting review of Civil War music.

Plans are well underway for the 2014 Victorian Christmas House Tours. It's a wonderful opportunity to tour some of Brookville's beautiful and unique homes, meet the homeowners and learn the architectural history of each house. This year's Victorian Christmas House Tour begins at the Rebecca Arthurs Library at 5:30pm on Saturday, December 6th at which time all ticket holders will be assigned to a specific group and given instructions for the evening tour.

A limited number of tickets is now available to Jefferson County Historical Society members and will be available to the general public on November 1st. JCHS members can take the opportunity of early presale tickets by enclosing the form below. The cost is $20.00 per person. This program is appropriate for adults and high school students.

It takes many volunteers to produce an event like the house tour. A crew of volunteers to set out and light luminarias shortly before the tours begin at 5:30pm, several volunteers to help with refreshments at the Rebecca Arthurs Library, costumed docents at each site, musicians, and tour guides to assist each group. Please contact us if you are interested in serving as a volunteer.

Are you considering offering your home for a future house tour? If so, this is the time to let the committee know and it is the time for you to go on the tour to learn what it entails. Homes need not be of the Victorian period (1837-1901), and the committee offers a good bit of assistance so that homeowners are not overwhelmed.

Brookville's first Victorian Christmas house tour was held more than twenty years ago. The popular tours, sponsored by Historic Brookville, Inc. continued through 2008, then resumed in 2012 when the Jefferson County History Center sponsored and arranged tours of homes on Franklin and Jefferson streets.

Our Mission

Our purpose is to engage people of all ages in the history of Jefferson County. We collect and care for relevant objects, images and documents and invite county residents and visitors to research our materials, interact with our exhibits, take part in our programs and read our publications, in order to encourage an understanding of our past and present and a vision for the future.
